

Unfair ban on scooters will upset Paris workers

The scooters are the best way to get to work for many people in Paris.

Hundreds of workers in Paris will have their travel plans ruined when a ban on electric scooters happens.

A public vote took place yesterday and it was decided that the useful scooters will be banned. Shockingly, only one in ten people took part in the vote which will now affect thousands of workers.

When the scooters were first introduced, they were thought to be good for the environment and easy to use. They have been used by the city's workers for five years, and many are not sure how they will travel to work now.

Linda Joëlle, 35, told journalists, "Now that I have found an excellent way to get to work, and one that is better for the environment, they are trying to ban it."

It now seems that the ban will go ahead and there is nothing that workers can do about it. Their worries and fears clearly do not matter to those in charge.
